PSYCHOLOGY AND REASONING IN THE ANGLO-GERMAN NAVAL AGREEMENT, 1935–1939

THOMAS HOERBER

44 École supérieure des sciences commerciales d’Angers

ABSTRACT

This article will analyse the psychology and reasoning in the Anglo-German naval agreement and the psychological elements that were involved. First, how did the precedent naval agreements influence the conclusion of the Anglo-German naval agreement? Secondly, what were the reasons for Germany to conclude it? Thirdly, what were the reasons for Britain to conclude it? Fourthly, how does it fit into the larger strategy of arms limitation? And, finally, what role did the Anglo-German naval agreement play in the overall strategy of Germany and Britain in the interwar years? In order to come to a conclusion about the reasons behind the agreement it is the thesis of this article that it is essential to include later changes and additions to the agreement. This part has been neglected in previous analyses. Particularly the reasons behind the termination...

Title: 'Changed Utterly'? Transformation and continuity in late twentieth-century Ireland.

20TH CENTURY
LIBERALIZATION (Finance)

Geographic Terms: IRELAND

Abstract: From about 1973, Irish history moved into a fast-forward phase culminating in an extraordinary economic boom for the Republic. This took place against the background of violence in Northern Ireland, up to the uneasy resolution of Good Friday 1998. It is now possible to try and analyse this era from a variety of sources, such as the reports of tribunals investigating corruption, contemporary memoirs, political records and investigative journalism. This article considers the forces and events behind dramatic and unforeseen change in politics, economics, cultural influence, religious profession and gender roles, and discusses how far the 'key' is to be found in American rather than European models and influence. Moreover, 'liberalization' in economic, religious, sexual and other spheres has been accompanied, on other levels, by a retreat into statistc attitudes - particularly concerning the construction of Irish 'identity' and the packaging of Irish history. This makes a less-than-ideal resolution in attitudes over the last thirty years of the twentieth century - the strengthening of partisan attitudes in the Republic, and the copper-fastening of the border between North and South.
